

Malaysian Journal of Animal Science (MJAS)

About MJAS

MJAS is an international peer-reviewed journal devoted to the publication of original papers based on research undertakings with the objectives to improve the quality of animal production, especially in the tropical environment, and ensure the sustainability of natural resources directly and indirectly affecting the livelihood and health of producers and consumers. MJAS also serves as a forum in exploring the viable options in addressing the issues of the animal industries.

MJAS is published in English and is open to global contributors in the areas of animal genetics, molecular genetics, animal breeding, reproductive and environmental physiology, growth and development, animal nutrition, feed resources, meat science, management, economics, biotechnology and environmental management. Currently two issues are published annually, in June and December. All manuscripts intended for publication in MJAS should be sent to the Editor-in-Chief of MJAS online at mo_ariff@upm.edu.my or mariffomar@gmail.com

The Editorial Board of MJAS aspires to raise the standards of scientific writings within the region through MJAS to be on par with other world renown and established journals in similar fields of study, especially in tropical livestock science and production. Contributions from researchers from Malaysia and other countries are therefore most welcomed.

MJAS is the official journal of the Malaysian Society of Animal Production (MSAP) which is an association of stakeholders much involved in the conduct of research and development, extension, promotion, conservation and education in the fields of animal production.
